Padre Pio's Spiritual Direction

"You need to hold fast to two virtues: kindness toward your neighbor and humility toward God."

"I trust that you will do this, because the great God who has taken you by the hand to draw you to Himself will not abandon you until He brings you into His eternal tabernacle. It is fitting, my dearest daughters, that you put all your efforts into eradicating any pretensions and thoughts of preeminence, because honor is never more attained than when it is despised. A desire for honor can disquiet the soul and lead to omissions and errors contrary to kindness and humility."

(To the Campanile sisters, October 18, 1917)

How to participate in the Eucharistic Revival (without ever leaving your house!)

This July, tens of thousands of Catholics will gather in Indianapolis to worship our Risen Lord in His humble Presence in the Eucharist.

What's happening? Why are crowds of Catholics descending upon this mid-western city?

They're answering the Church's call for a revival. Three years ago, the USCCB called for a movement committed to rekindling a living relationship with the Eucharist. This desire to re-consecrate our nation to the Real Presence has led to a National Eucharistic Revival—which will culminate in the National Eucharistic Congress in July.

The mission of this revival should be close to the heart of every Catholic. However, not everyone can make it to Indianapolis this summer. So how do we participate if we can't travel?

Here are a few ideas:

1. Pray for a renewal of our country's faith in the Real Presence of Our Lord in the Eucharist.
2. Spend more time with Our Lord in Adoration and the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass.

Sign up to receive our all-new, totally-free documentary on the Eucharist and watch it in the comfort of your own home on the Feast of the Most Precious Blood of Jesus.

Lastly, you can do your own personal Eucharistic Revival with the 30-Day Eucharistic Revival: A Retreat with St. Peter Julian Eymard. As the "Apostle of the Eucharist," St. Peter Julian will help you reinvigorate your belief in Our Lord's Real Presence and deepen your love for Him.

THE VATICAN FLAG

The flag of Vatican City, also referred to as the flag of the Holy See, was adopted in 1929, the year Pope Pius XI signed the Lateran Treaty with Italy, creating the new independent state of Vatican City. The Holy See, which governs Vatican City, has ecclesiastical jurisdiction over the worldwide Catholic Church. As a result, the flag is also a symbol of Catholic faith or identity, and is not only displayed at this part of Italy, but also in Catholic churches, universities and other Catholic institutions.

Just like other national flags, the design of the Vatican flag has rich meaning. The flag is modeled after the flag of the Papal States from the early nineteenth century, and is also referred to as the flag of the Holy See. Many earlier papal flags were red and gold.

SYMBOLS

The left side of the flag is a rich yellow. The right side is white and features the coat of arms of Vatican City. At the top of the coat of arms is the papal tiara, which was worn by popes from the eighth century to the mid-twentieth century.

Beneath the papal tiara are two keys, referring to Matthew 16:19, when Jesus says to St. Peter, "I will give you the keys to the kingdom of heaven." The gold key represents spiritual power and the silver key stands for worldly power. The keys are connected with a red cord, which symbolizes how the two powers are bound together.

Regarding the choice of yellow and white for the flag, there are various historical and symbolic explanations for these colors. One possible connection is to the keys themselves: the yellow field corresponding to the gold key, the white to the silver key. In heraldry, yellow is equivalent to gold (the heraldic color or) and white to silver (argent). The colors certainly offer a striking visual echo of the keys of Peter. In 2010, the Apostolic Nunciature to Germany stated that the flag does not have to be square.

HISTORY

Before 1808, the Papal States commonly used a bicolor, yellow-red flag, which was derived from the colours of the Holy See's coat of arms, as well as being the two traditional colours of the Senate and the Roman people. In 1798, Napoleon established the Roman Republic, which introduced a black, white, and red flag; after the Papal rule was restored, Pope Pius VII restored the Papal cockade, which was described as red and yellow.

In 1808, Pope Pius VII ordered the Vatican's Noble Guard and other troops to replace red color with white, in order to distinguish them from the troops that had been incorporated into Napoleon's army.

In 1803, the Papal States started using a white merchant flag with the Papal coat of arms in the centre. This flag was made official on 7 June 1815. On 17 September 1825, it was replaced with a yellow and white flag which took its colours from the materials of the two keys (yellow for gold, white for silver). These colors were probably taken from the 1808 flag of the Palatine guard.<sup>[16]</sup> This was the first bicolor used by the Papal States and the ancestor of the modern flag of Vatican City.<sup>[17]</sup> The merchant flag also served as a state flag on land.

Starting in 1831, the papal infantry flew square yellow and white flags. At first, they were diagonally divided, but after 1849 they were vertically divided like the merchant flag. The last infantry colour, adopted in 1862, was a plain square white and yellow flag.

On 8 February 1849, while Pope Pius IX was in exile in Gaeta, a Roman Republic was declared. The new government's flag was the Italian tricolor with the motto "Dio e Popolo" on the central stripe. The papal government and its flags were restored on 2 July 1849. On 20 September 1870, the Papal States were conquered by Italy.

After the Lateran Treaty was signed in 1929, papal authorities decided to use the 1825–1870 merchant flag as the state flag of the soon to be independent Vatican City state. The treaty came into effect on 7 June 1929.
